

Short Bio – Sophia Gaston

Sophia Gaston is a London-based foreign policy researcher and geopolitical analyst. She is currently the UK Foreign Policy Lead at the global security think tank, ASPI. She is also the Founder and Lead of the AUKUS Industry Forum. Sophia's research explores how best Britain can advance its core strategic interests, respond to the rise of authoritarian states like China and Russia, reinvigorate its closest alliances, integrate economic and national security, and build public consent for an ambitious global agenda. She is recognised as an expert on the Euro-Atlantic and Indo-Pacific security theatres, and has authored influential reports and briefings on China, AUKUS, Transatlantic relations, and the UK's security posture in Europe. Sophia is an Expert Associate at the National Security College in Canberra, and an Academic Fellow at the European Policy Centre.
